Her life was irregular, and about two months ago she became violent, fancying that demons were pursuing her, and she made an attempt to throw herself from the window. On Sunday she again tried to hurl herself into the street, but fell to the floor while crossing the room. Immediately her senses returned and she begged ged the neighbors to take care of her. She consented to be removed from the hospital, but insisted on wearing her jewels. She wished to take also two pug dogs with blue ribbons about their nicks. Among her effects are elegant stage costumes, the value of which is probably $10,000. She played several Shakespearean roles including 'Hamilet.' During her nours of delirium also wrode back and forth in her room reciting long passages from Macheth, Othello and Romeo and Juliet.
